Brownstone Security Launches Partner Program
Partner Opportunities Now Available for Remote Video Monitoring Services

(Redondo Beach, CA—November 9, 2009...) Brownstone Security launches its partner program to establish strategic partnerships with security companies to allow them to offer remote video monitoring and virtual guard tours services directly to their clients. Brownstone Security will provide constant, real-time monitoring to all new locations from their central monitoring station located in Redondo Beach, CA.

Ashley Felts, assistant director of marketing, says, “The partner program is a great way for us to expand our services to markets which we do not usually target. We believe that in some cases remote video monitoring and virtual guard tours services can monitor locations in a more cost-effective, error-free way than a physical security guard can, and we are excited to be working with new clients in a variety of different industries. The security partner program is also very exciting because we are able to customize partnerships with each new company that we start doing business with.”

The partner program includes both resellers and systems partners, as well as an e-store partner program. All levels receive marketing and technical support, and partners will now be able to deliver integrated systems that can either be used as a new layer of security, or to supplement or replace current security officers on-site.

Program partners will also have access to the latest research and news in the fields of systems communications, video surveillance, and surveillance monitoring. While Brownstone Security is starting this program in a few pre-selected states, it plans to roll out the program nation-wide by the end of 2010.
